

Juri Andruchowytch, Andrzej StasiukMy Europe - Essays

Original title: Moja Evropa, Klasika, published in 2000 by Czarne

(German title: Mein Europa)

ca. 160 pages

Paperback

2004

© Susanne Schleyer

Juri Andruchowytch was born in 1960 in Ivano-Frankivsk, Ukraine. He is considered the leading contemporary Ukrainian writer. He writes poems, prose, essays and translates from German and Polish.

Awards (selection):

Leipziger Buchpreis zur Europäischen Verständigung
2006

Sonderpreis des Erich-Maria-Remarque-Friedenspreises
2005

Sold to

Spanish world rights (Quaderns Crema/El Acantilado), Italy (print edition Mimesis / digital edition GoWare), Hungary (Kijarat), Bulgaria (Lektura), Romania (Polirom); previously published in the respective language / territory; rights available again: France (Noir sur Blanc), Croatia (Fraktura)

About

© Brigitte Friedrich

Andrzej Stasiuk, born 1960 in Warsaw and raised there, lives in the Beskides since the year of 1986. He writes poems, stories, novels, also works as a journalist and script author and together with his wife Monika Sznajderman directs the publishing house Czarne located in Wolowiec. He has received numerous literary awards, among them the Samuel Bogumil Linde Prize for Literature (2002), the Nike Prize (Poland, 2005) for On The Road to Babadag, the Adalbert Stifter Prize (2005), the Vilenica Prize and the Austrian State Prize for European Literature (2016).